

CIA Played Eye Spy

Washington (Chicago Tribune) — The CIA financed a project in 1975 to develop a new kind of agent who could truly be called a spoor, CIA Director Adm. Stansfield Turner disclosed yesterday.

The CIA chief said that the agency found a man who could "see" what was going on anywhere in the world through psychic powers. Turner said CIA scientists and officials would show the man a picture of a place and he would then describe any activity going on there at that time.

The tight-lipped CIA chief wouldn't reveal how accurate the agent was; but he said the agency dropped the project. "He died," Turner said, "and we haven't heard from him since."
